The comment Macbeth, after discussing crime with Lady Macbeth, decided to pass through the "terrible feat" (1.7.75). He now sits on his own, waiting for the bell that convenes him to the decision of his own will. The attention of the soliloquy, the invisible dagger, is our first look of Macbeth's powerful imagination. A imagination that is largely responsible for the mental torment of him during the drama. Although Macbeth knows that the dagger is an optical illusion, and suspects that it can be caused by its potentially "hot brain" (39), however it allows the ghostly dagger, soon stained with imaginations "Gouts of Blood" (46), to hit him considerably. Improving the hominal and disturbing atmosphere of the speech is the use of allusions subsequent to people and practices that evoke images of satanic evil and soil. Hecate, the goddess of witchcraft and a strong presence in the Macbeth complex, is preparing his sacrificial victims, and Murder himself, convened by his trusted man, the wolf, moves with the power and speed of the evil re Tarquin towards the his prey. Just like talking about the murder, Macbeth's intense illusion of him is about to suffocate him is shattered by the bell, a Lady Macbeth signal that Duncan's waiter are sleeping, and Macbeth runs away to commit the heinous crime. You can only ask if any other moment of resolution would have changed Macbeth's mind. Moreover the speech is very famous, it is the climatic decision that takes soliloquy and is a high point of tension within the game. Structurally it means the act of Duncan's death which in turn leads to turbulence. "Is it a dagger I see in front of me, the handle towards my hand? Come and fry yourself," the dagger has more than one symbolism within the speech is simply a tool of use for Macbeth, but also could be seen as the repetitive imagination of a 'prick' of consciousness as you could argue that Macbeth is a moral man who is corrupt. Moreover, especially in this scene, the dagger is a guide to the murder he commits "you swamp me the way I was going and such a tool I should use." It is the Latin to "reach" then dramatizes the intention in action, it can also convey that Macbeth is passing the threshold of human limitation. Another element of the speech is the link between madness and supernatural possession. "Are you not, fatal vision, sensitive to the feeling of seeing?", suggesting that it could be a fateful "appearance" that leads him to the murder, transmitting as well as witches could have internal control overBut even in the same line, à é seo you are a dagger of the mind, a false creation that proceeds from the thermo -challenge brain, Macbeth recognizes the madness that could have occurred in him this is enhanced by how the public never sees the public Descaical to give the topic that is only the degeneration of Macbeth's mind that shows him the dagger. Therefore, implying that, even if the witches improve the supernatural experience, it is truly the ambition à é ooa é.™ er leapingà é of Macbeth that brings it closer to the murder. The anxiety atmosphere is consistent throughout the scene, à é œCorvello thermo-oppressed à é exemplifies the weight of anxiety on the consciousness of the Macbeths, and the Jacobian et world believed that the headquarters of consciousness was on the heart. An alternative interpretation is that the speech is clearly separated in two mits, the first is the charm of the dagger and the second is a sound landscape / images of the night, they work together to create a tense tone but also prefigure the darkness of being. The imagination of the night begins with the "unbridled dreams abuse sleep sleep", there is an image of obsession with the sense of the interior, literally wise context have slept in huge beds with curtains around them also could be prefiguring The abuse in his sleep that Lady Macbeth experiments. Then there is a sound landscape created À the wolf, whose Howl watch, the disturbing sound of the wolf coupled with the Christian imagination of a wolf that represents the devil here on earth as reported by Jesus to the followers of him. Comparing both the wolf and the à Tarquinà that was known in Greek mythology to be a rapid note, a clear literary allusion, in the sense that it was to rape duncan of his life, but could also mean his desire. The sound is then removed à é à é œThou safe and stopping earth, not listening to my steps, which way they walk, means the theme Macbeth of occultation to all introspectively and outwardly also looking, covering his actions not only in the eyes of man, but also in the eyes of heaven and earth. There is then the phase direction for a "ring of bells" the bell is a signifier that is the time for Macbeth to commit the murder. Macbeth is a drama written in the 16th century by William Shakespeare. Like similar to other works written by Shakespeare, the game is not entirely original. They came from facts and events that are happening over time was written ("Back for Macbeth"). Macbeth can be seen as a dark game as it portrays the idea of wickedness through characterization and have events such as the murder that happens throughout history. Throughout the game, Shakespeare has inserted various features to make his writing more powerful. In this essay, I will analyze literary elements, linguistic characteristics and structural characteristics that are present in Act 2 Scene 1 from lines 39 to 72. Macbeth soliloquy. The main plot that happens in this soliloquy is that Macbeth is working on his plan to kill King Duncan so that he can become king according to the prophecy of witches in Act 1 Scene 1. Within this soliloquy, Shakespeare added numerous amounts of literary devices with the aim of giving a visual image to the... show more content... This is an example of a paradox from the text. The purpose of this paradox is to emphasize how Macbeth is when he was committing the murder. The dagger's hallucination feared him by making him confused with himself. In addition to the paradox, Shakespeare also uses metaphor as a comparison between two different objects to create a more intense figure in the reader's mind as "A dagger of the mind, a false creation" (2.1.46) and "Natura seems dead" (2.1.58). "Nature seems dead" (2.1.58)a hyperbole found in the text with the purpose of underlining how nature has become again and that seems to be dead. Otherof a hyperbole found in this text is à é œOra ora é.™ er the only worldà é (2.1.57). This line is basically prefiguring that a mate of the world is deceived by this plan. The mate of the world is not actually, but most of the people in the area. This hyperbole exaggerates the quantity of Macbeth people is
